WARSAW STREETS FILLED WITH DEAD; POLES STILL FIGHT

British and French Still Determined Not To Succumb to Peace Offer

SUGGESTED BY IL DUCE

British To Redeem Europe From Perpetual Fear of German Aggression

By International News Service
Warsaw, its streets said by Poles to be littered with dead, its buildings aflame, but its defenders fighting on, today was a smoking example of what modern war means, but it failed to daunt the French and British in their determination not to succumb to any German peace gestures.

Italian Premier Mussolini's speech urging that now was the time to end the war, and Germany's statement that the campaign in Poland is concluded, were felters which Chancellor Hitler was expected to follow up shortly with more concrete proposals.

But these were turned down in advance—and Britain and France now believe that Chancellor Hitler is at last convinced that he is in for a fight to the finish on the western front.

Il Duce suggested that since Germany had presented an accomplished fact in Poland, and that since Britain did not declare war on the Soviet Union for its invasion of Poland, it was absurd to carry on the conflict.

With unswerving purpose Britain replied, through the ministry of information: "The German invasion was a further illustration of the lawlessness in international affairs which it is Pittsburgh, Sept. 25.—Pennsylvania Supreme Court today upheld the five-mill franchise tax on out of state corporations.

The decision, announced by Chief Justice John W. Kephart, reversed the ruling of the Dauphin County court and remitted the record to the State Department of Revenue for settlement of tax claims. Trust Company Inaugurates New Service To Customers

The Bristol Trust Company has added another feature in the way of service to its customers. The new feature is "Register Check" service. The register check is similar to a money order.

A person desiring to pay a bill by check or send money away by check fills out a special form at the Bristol Trust Co., pays a small service charge, about ten cents up to $100. Then the amount of money called for on the check is left with the Trust Company.

The plan permits those not having accounts to pay bills by checks and also permits persons to use the check system of paying bills but at the same time avoiding a service charge because they cannot afford to keep a sufficient balance to maintain a checking account.

BANK BANDITS TO PLEAD GUILTY IN TWO CASES

Six Hold-Ups Are Charged Against Youthful Trio At Doylestown

NOT ALL IN BUCKS CO.

Six holdups, including two banks, are charged against the youthful Bucks county bandit trio, members of which will plead guilty this week in Bucks county criminal court.

Pleas will be taken in the Dublin National Bank holdup case and in a Sellersville gasoline station holdup case. The bandits are also charged with holding up the Raritan, N. J., bank, a gasoline station in Upper Moreland Township, another gas station near Ringoes, N. J., and a holdup near Flemington, N. J.

The three bandits, William Hennessey, 19, Stanley Bratec, 19, and Leon Kulish, 23, are in the Bucks County Prison. Hennessey and Kulish lived in the Buckingham section while Bratec lived near Pipersville.

Statements given Corporal William Herman, of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police, resulted in his calling Montgomery County Detective Albert Murphy and Chief of Police George Flack, Lower Moreland township, Montgomery county, to Doylestown recently.

Hennessey made a statement to Detective Murphy and Chief Flack in which he stated that the trio held up and robbed a gas station at Second street pike and Byberry road, June 7, this year. The other two admitted the crime but said Hennessey was the only one to carry a gun.

An elderly attendant and small boy at the gas station were forced to lie flat on the floor while the bandits grabbed $14 from the cash register and escaped with cigarettes, chewing gum and other merchandise. A detainer warrant was placed against them.

The Dublin National Bank robbery was on June 13 and the Raritan bank on July 18.

Washington, Sept. 25. AS the battle over the embargo begins certain basic facts are so clear—or at least should be—that contention concerning them seems more or less ruled out. However, through the flood of words soon to descend upon us, they need to be kept in mind, and it seems worth while to restate them simply.

ONE is that the President and those who support him in the effort to lift the embargo are as convinced that that is the way to keep us out of war as Senator Borah and his isolationist colleagues are certain that it will put President Judge Hiram H. Keller said the Court was in accord with the jury's conclusion in this case, and that the verdict was justifiable because there was purely circumstantial evidence surrounding the defendant's actions.

The defendant, who was warned by the Court about being careless with matches in a barn or, if he had a tendency to burn buildings, told him that

THE SILENT ONES

Weeks have gone by since Senator Taft announced his willingness to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President. But nothing has as yet been heard from Senators Bridges of New Hampshire and Lodge of Massachusetts, nor from Representatives Bruce Barton and Hamilton Fish of New York, all of whom are frequently held to be at least receptive candidates.

Even Senator Vandenberg, counted as a positive candidate, is still coy. However, with President Roosevelt setting an example, it is not strange that others follow it, doing nothing to drive the buzzing bees away but also doing nothing to have them.

Taft of Ohio and Vandenberg of Michigan are held to be the outstanding Presidential possibilities with congressional background. Each comes from an important and doubtful state. Ohio, with 26 votes, ranks fourth among the states in the electoral college; Michigan, with nineteen votes, ranks seventh. There has never been a President from Michigan, but Ohio stands with New York in having sent more men to the Presidency than any other state—six each. Ohio has sent more men to the White House since the Civil War than any other state.

Senator Taft is the son of former President Taft. The only son of a President to become President was John Quincy Adams, son of John Adams. Benjamin Harrison was the grandson of William Henry Harrison. Senator Vandenberg was first elected to the Senate in 1928, a Republican year, getting 73 per cent of the vote. He survived the Democratic landslide in 1934, getting 52 per cent of the vote. Senator Taft was first elected to the Senate in 1938, a Democratic year but one with marked Republican gains.

1940, SEE-AMERICA YEAR

Assuming the San Francisco Fair will be held over a second summer, George Creel, United States Commissioner to the Fair, sounds the President out on the prospect of a Federal contribution to its maintenance. Mr. Creel is an old hand at making out a good case, and may have one here.

He sees 1940 as a great See-America year, because of the war in Europe. The San Francisco Fair as a tourist attraction has the merit of taking the traveler by way of the great Western national parks which have been heavily attended this year. It has meant considerable business to railroads, and this should be of interest to the Government, since self-supporting railroads are much to be preferred to roads that are public charges. The Fair means more business to a great number of private enterprises, in California and along the traveled routes to it, which are supporting government with taxes.

The returns to itself of a donation by the Government to an undertaking like the Fair are not immediate and visible, but if they could be traced would probably come to a surprising figure. It is a type of activity which infects others with its presence and any prosperity it enjoys. The appropriation for this year was $5,000,000, but the Fair is built, and no such second donation is needed. Washington, however, may see the wisdom of giving it a second lift as a matter of self-interest.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Feb. 21, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The following items are culled from The Bucks County Gazette, issue of February 21, 1878:

On Saturday last, the Court appointed Alfred Blaker, John Widman, and Charles R. Bickering, commissioners to inquire into the propriety of dividing Bristol borough into such a number of wards as the exigencies of the citizens thereof may require. The petition asking for this charge was presented to court on Monday of last week, and was signed by 16 prominent Democrats, the entire Independent Republican party, J. B. Meers, N. Tyler, and L. A. Hognet, five Republicans, one Labor Reformer, and one gentleman (Mallon S. Kirkbride), who as a matter of conscience, never takes any part in political matters, National, state or local.

The Delaware Valley Advance has been counting up the number of houses erected in Bristol during the past year, and reports in this wise: Those erected on the South and East side of the canal, are as follows: Logan street, 7; Lafayette, 5; Washington, 8; Penn, 12; Cedar, 6; total, 37. North and West of the canal: Pine street, 31; Buckley, 3; Race, 3; Lake, 12; Bath, 4; Swain, 22; Maple, 1; total, 67; making a grand total of 104 new residences that have been added to Bristol, and counting five persons to each house, over 500 have been added to the population.

Walter Bache, Frank Stradling and George Smith, formerly firemen on the Columbia, sailed for Brazil on the Richmond last Thursday.

Two hogs were killed at the Cottage Hotel, yesterday, one weighing 664 pounds, and the other 632.

Services were held yesterday at St. Mark's Church, in commemoration of the death of Pope Pius IX.

The second annual ball of the Washington Cornet Band comes off tomorrow evening at Cabene's Hall.

Mahlon Gibbs, of Solebury, will be the first colored man who ever sat on a jury in Bucks County. His name was drawn last week. He will serve on the traverse jury the second week of April court.

The donation on Friday evening last, to Rev. J. S. Cook, was a very pleasant affair. The paragon was crowded with visitors from half past seven until late in the evening, and among other interesting events was the presentation to Mrs. Cook of a silver butter dish, and to Mr. Cook a hand-some pocket communion service, also of silver. In response to the remarks made upon the presentation of the articles, Mr. Cook referred in a happy but feeling manner to the pleasant relations that had always existed between himself and his congregation, the delegates from Swaim, an original contribution in found friends wherever he went, he was compelled to say that in no place had he ever found warmer hearts or truer friends than in Bristol.

Amended Heston, B. J. Smith, and Samuel Swain were the delegates from this county at the general conference of the First-day schools of the United States held at Baltimore on the 11th instant.

The Philadelphia, Newtown and New York Railroad issue excursion tickets from Newtown to Philadelphia and return for $1.25. There are 25 stations along the line of the road, but the trains only stop regularly at a portion of them. Freight is charged 12 cents per 100 pounds to Newtown, for general merchandise.

The chairman of the committee on arrangements has received a letter from Hon. Simon Cameron, ex-United States Senator, stating that he will be present at the Centennial of Doylestown. The Adjutant General of New Jersey will also be there, and says it is probable that Gov. McClellan will also be present.

NEW HOPE—Dr. G. W. Finlaw, of Salem, N. J., has been delivering some medical lectures in Lambertville. Meetings in the New Hope chapel are to be resumed this week.

The Temperance Lyceum was more than crowded on Friday evening, and the exercises, which were of the usual entertaining nature and variety were listened to with close attention. Among the things offered for the entertainment of the audience was a song by Miss Anna Booth, a reading now—is strongly behind his proposals. The people as a whole want to aid Britain and France—in every way "short of war." However, it is equally clear that the oratorical advantage in the Senate will be on the other side. The Administration has no one who in eloquence or in argument equals Borah, Johnson, Vandenberg, Clarke or La Follette. They are not only the most forceful speakers but the most determined and resourceful of the Senators.

AS the situation is considered, it is impossible not to recall the similarity to the League of Nations battle in the Senate twenty years ago when Woodrow Wilson was President. Unquestionably, this is the most vital question of foreign policy that has arisen in this country since that day. Then, as now, the President had with him a majority of the country and a majority of the Senate. Then, as now, he was opposed by a band of able, determined, resourceful men. That under those circumstances Mr. Wilson was defeated, most persons believe, was due to the utter inflexibility with which he insisted upon having the thing he wanted exactly as he wanted it, and rejected the possible compromises his friends felt desirable.

IT is not likely that history will repeat itself in that way. Nevertheless, it is interesting to note that Senators Borah and Johnson—two of the leaders of the Senate opposition today in this matter upon which so much depends—were leaders in the fight twenty years ago, which prevented the United States from entering the League of Nations. The outcome of that fight was the wreckage of the only great constructive proposal for abolishing war that existed in the world. The outcome of that fight was to render futile what, with our weight behind it, might have become an effective instrument for the permanent preservation of peace.

IN the opinion of many, had Mr. Wilson won instead of lost his fight there would not today be raging the sort of conflagration which is devouring Europe and menacing us. It seems incredible that after twenty years the same men could again thwart the will of the American people and affect the destinies not only of this nation but the world. Yet, here they are—able, aged, convinced that they are right and that the great weight of nonpartisan and informed opinion, which is on the other side, is wrong.

IT seems incredible that these men, a small minority in the Senate and representing a minority in the country, again can defeat an American President supported by popular sentiment, and divert this nation from the course which the majority agrees is in the interests of peace and for the national good. Yet, that's what they aim to do. The grotesqueness of the situation is not lessened by the fact that their motives are not selfish and their patriotism beyond question.

"KNIGHT ERRANT"

by Jack McDonald

SYNOPSIS

It was post time for the Santa Anita Handicap. "Coronado," the favorite, with fourteen straight wins, pranced on the track to the applause of the crowd. Dan Mills, his owner, a sportsman of high calibre, hung on the rail, watching. Just a few hours ago, he had collapsed in the tack room and Charley Bassitt, horseman of unsavory reputation, had taken "Coronado" to the receiving barn. Thrilling with excitement, Dan's 18-year-old daughter, Heather, watches from her box. In the unreserved section is "Slim" Maynard and his pal, "Snapper" Elliott. "Slim," born Andrew Branson Maynard, knew horses; his father had a string of thoroughbreds when Slim was a boy, but a flood ruined the Maynard stables and Slim is now on his uppers. All he and Snapper could scrape together was bet on "Coronado" today. Slim sees Bassitt come from the $50 window with a wad of tickets and wonders which horse he was betting on. Coronado, fractious at the post, pinions his leg on the stall gate. With the yell, "They're Off!" he rushes to the lead, apparently uninjured, but before the horses had gone a sixteenth of a mile, Coronado's legs buckled and he crashed headlong to the ground—dying of a broken back. The blow is too much for Dan and, next day, he dies. All that are left to Heather are a breeding farm in Carmel Valley and "Artichokes," a stable-hand of whom Coronado was especially fond. Three days later, Heather sits in the lobby of the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles, crushed and lonely. The place buzzed with rumors regarding Charlie Bassitt and Coronado's "accidental" death. Artichokes shuffles in to inform Heather that her bags are packed and the car ready for their trip to Carmel Valley. Her despair at going back is lightened by Artichokes surprising news that "Sweet Alice," the little brood mare on the farm, is "expectant" and there may be a successor to Coronado.

CHAPTER V

Heather swung her roadster off the highway near the old Carmel Mission, and headed up the winding road that led to the Mills farm, deep back in the valley. The long ride from Los Angeles had been tiring to a girl already drained of emotion.

Crowded beside her in the single seat were Artichokes, Coronado's racing saddle, and a framed colored print of Heather's father she had found hanging on the tack room wall at Santa Anita.

The print showed old Dan in the familiar tweeds and black hat and flowing black necktie, standing with Coronado the day the horse, already legendary, had won the Hopeful.

They turned into the stone flanked driveway that led to the Spanish type farm house nestled under two massive live oaks. It was late in the afternoon and the scrub vines on the slopes of the mountain were beginning to be lost in a haze of purple.

Heather shut off the motor. She sat looking at the empty house, conscious of a dull, aching loneliness.

A woodpecker, drilling at a cypress tree near the house, jerked Heather out of her trance. For the moment it sounded like hooves pounding.

Instantly a vision rushed back to her—a sudden thought of Artichokes' staggering message in the Biltmore lobby.

"I still can't believe it, Artichokes!" Heather cried, leaving the car like a small, sunny whirlwind. "I'm going to ask Sweet Alice herself!"

Artichokes stared dimly through the windshield.

"Who all said a horse can talk?"

"Horses can talk," flung back Heather stubbornly. "They're human—almost. Dan said so. And—Dan—knew."

Her voice quavered when she mentioned her father's name. But her small heels sped around the gravel walk and under the cypress trees to the pasture beside the breeding barn.

Standing in the pasture was the stodgy brown brood mare, Sweet Alice, methodically champing sweet green timothy as if all her destiny was centered upon one salient purpose, to become, and in the very near future, a "mama."

"Another Coronado," Heather told Artichokes firmly again and again during the days and nights of waiting that seemed endless to the anxious girl. "It must be."

"Sweet Alice," called Heather, and Artichokes replied. "Neber can tell 'til you get 'em to the post. . . . If dey was any way of tellin', Mr. Belmont would neber have sold Man O' War to Mr. Riddle for five thousand dollars as a yearling. No, ma'am!"

Heather fed the new colt from a formula outlined by Doc Boles, the Carmel veterinarian. After that she nursed him with a baby's bottle.

"Artichokes," she asked one day, "how do they name horses?"

"Oh," he shrugged, "some of 'em after candy bars, or battleships. Or wives or!"

"Candy bars!" Heather thought disgustedly. "Well, my little knight errant."

"Knight Errant! That's what I'm going to call him," said Heather, sprinkling the colt with brook water.

Her father had always hoped that the Carmel farm would be a breeding establishment where he could retire, with Coronado, at the end of their active campaigning. He had pictured Coronado as a famous sire when his racing days were over.

Aside from a few disappointing visits from her Aunt Elmore, who lived in Piedmont and loathed any mention of racing and horses, the 18-year-old girl was utterly alone.

"Whenever it happens, Artichokes, call me," she had given firm orders. "No matter what hour of the day or night."

But when the moment came that Sweet Alice gave her bleating whiny for human aid in the foaling barn, Heather's hopes twisted and died and were reborn a million times. Sweet Alice was dead two hours later.

Heather and Artichokes carried from the foaling barn into the war-torn Spanish living room of the farm-house a long legged, scrawny, idiotic looking creature with an immense hammer head that hung dizzily from Heather's arm.

"Artichokes!" she said reverently, wrapping the strange looking brooding in a white blanket. "Isn't he beautiful! I never saw anything so magnificent. Not a white hair on him—black as coal. He looks exactly like Coronado!"

Foolproof Grape Spreads

By BETTY BARCLAY

Today's column is dedicated to every woman who wants to celebrate grape season with a cupboardful of perfect spreads! For all you need to put the jelly in jelly is a recipe that assures the correct balance of pectin, sugar, and acid.

Excellent examples of the new, foolproof directions are these for Concord grape jelly and butter. Not only do they turn out spreads with extra good flavor, but the half-minute boil means two-thirds more glasses into the bargain.

Be sure to follow directions exactly, as they were specially developed for this particular fruit:

Concord Grape Jelly and Butter

To prepare fruit, stem about 5 pounds fully ripe grapes and crush thoroughly. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup water, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer 5 minutes. Separate juice from pulp by placing hot fruit in 2-quart sieve. For Jelly: Run enough juice through a double layer of cheesecloth held in a small sieve to obtain 4 cups of strained juice. For Butter: Rub grapes, from which juice has drained, through sieve to obtain $4\frac{1}{2}$ cups pulp. Use the excess juice or water, if necessary, to fill up last $\frac{1}{2}$ cup.

Concord Grape Jelly

(Makes about 11 medium glasses)

4 cups juice

 $7\frac{1}{2}$ cups sugar $\frac{1}{2}$ bottle fruit pectin

Measure sugar and juice, prepared as above, into large saucepan and mix.

Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard $\frac{1}{2}$ minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin at once.

Concord Grape Butter

4 $\frac{1}{2}$ cups pulp

7 cups sugar

 $\frac{1}{2}$ bottle fruit pectin

Measure sugar and grape pulp, prepared as above, into large Kettle. Mix well.

Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Pour quickly. Paraffin at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Ripe Grape Conserve

There isn't space in my column to give the recipe for that extraordinary spread shown in the picture—but directions are included in Alice Blake's little cook-booklet, "Jelly Shelf Classics." She'll be glad to send you a free copy if you write her at the National Jellymaking Institute, Dept. G, 441 Madison Avenue, New York City.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr, the most talked-about woman in motion pictures today, arrive as the newest and most fascinating romantic team of the screen in "Lady of the Tropics," opening today at the Grand Theatre. For the first co-starring picture for two of the most dynamic personalities to skyrocket to fame in motion pictures in recent years, a love story was chosen that has been elected as ideal for their respective abilities, with Taylor seen as a young American adventurer and Miss Lamarr as a mysterious beauty of the East.

BRISTOL THEATRE

A snappy mystery comedy is Monogram's "Irish Luck," Frankie Darro starring picture which opened Sunday at the Bristol Theatre. In a role tailor-made to his talents, Darro is at last given plenty of opportunity for light comedy, and, needless to say, he makes the most of it.

"Irish Luck" is really a mystery story. Adapted from Charles Molyneux Brown's "Death Hops the Bell," it is the tale of an inquisitive bellhop at the Hotel Royale, whose hobby is "detecting." Because of this addiction to criminology, Buzzy gets in bad with the police.

RITZ THEATRE

The Don Cossacks, world-famous male singers, make their first screen appearance in more than a year in Paramount's "Hotel Imperial," which opens today at the Ritz Theatre with Isa Miranda, Ray Milland and Reginald Owen heading a large cast. The last time the Don Cossacks were seen in a film was in "Maytime."

The chorus boasts a history as dramatic as any story ever filmed in Hollywood! Russian soldiers during the World War, the singers banded together in a Turkish prison camp and decided to make a career of singing if they ever were freed.

St. Ann's Eleven Defeated In Opening Game Of The Season; Score 3-0

ST. ANN'S LOSES FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON TO DISSTON, 3 TO 0

Perfect Field Goal by Wahon Gave Victors The Game

SCORED IN 3RD PERIOD

"Saints" Outscored Disstons in Number of First Downs

A perfect field goal by "Hunkle" Wahon gave the Disston Scholastics a 3-0 triumph over the St. Ann's A. A. gridsters yesterday afternoon on the former's field, State Road and Unruh street, Tacony. It was the opening game of the season for both elevens.

Wahon's three-pointer, a placement, occurred in the third period. The Disston team had recovered a St. Ann's fumble on the twenty-yard line and they tried three plays and on each occasion a St. Ann's player broke through to toss the player for a loss.

Wahon then stepped back and with a team-mate waiting to catch the ball prepared for his placement. He was fifteen yards from the sidelines. The toss from center was wonderful. Wahon's toe met the pigskin in the exact spot. The ball whirled and spun directly over the cross-bars for the winning points.

The field goal did not daunt the light St. Ann's gridsters for in the final period with Tony Orazi and Eli Tettemer leading the attack, the Purple and Gold made a sustained march down the field only to lose the ball by a fumble on the nine yard line. The march netted a total of fifty-five yards.

The Saints outscored the Disston team in the number of first downs, 4-3 and gained the most yardage through scrimmage. This was despite the fact that the Scholastics outweighed the Bristol team over ten pounds to a man.

Coach "Bill" Dougherty was elated over the showing of the Wood Streeters and pleased with the showing of his entire squad. He used thirty-one players in the tilt and feels certain that the localities will be on top when they meet the Lambertville Ramblers next Sunday on the Jerseyites' field.

PIEGLE PITTED AGAINST MIMMS AT THE ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 25.—Following close on the heels of his sensational opening card, Promoter Sammy Arto's second card bids fair to be just as action-packed as the first. The feature eight-rounder will pit Tommy Spiegle, clever Jewish lightweight of Uniontown, Pa., against Billy Mimms, rangy Philadelphia Negro, at the Trenton Arena tonight.

Spiegle has earned the plaudits of the crowd consistently and his most recent feat was a win over Lew Fortuna in his last Arena appearance. Mimms has quite a reputation as a fighter, having beaten Billy White and Pat Mangini and scored a knockout triumph over Midget Wolgast.

Two other eight-round bouts are also on the card. Trenton's Stanley Pyontek, winner in his last four starts here, will do battle with Harvey Massey, of New Orleans. Massey in his last fight here scored a knockout over Mickey Finn, clever Negro puncher.

The other eight is a re-match of last show's best bout. Larry Mangine, of Trenton, will trade blows with Goat Kennedy, lethal-fisted Philadelphia lad. Mangine shaded Kennedy in a six-rounder on the last show.

A six-rounder bout will find Percy Cooper, of Trenton, exchanging blows with Wild Man Pat Mangini, of Philadelphia. Mangini is the "Tony Galento" type of fighter and is always supplying the crowd with plenty of action.

A four-rounder will pit Charlie Rauch, of Trenton, crossing punches with Willie Thomas, of Kensington. Rauch gave a good account of himself in his last go here.

BILLY CONN CONFIDENT OF VICTORY OVER BETTINA

By Ed Kiely
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—(INS)—Billy Conn said today he had been "starving so long before he won the light heavyweight championship that no concrete mixer is going to take it away from me."

The "concrete mixer" was his reference to Melio Bettina, from whom he won the title in a disputed decision in New York last May and whom he fights for the same title in Pittsburgh this evening.

"Bettina got Billy Conn mad," the light heavy champ averred in between gulps at a quart of milk—his after training bill of fare.

"He" (Bettina), Conn continued scornfully, "told everyone over the radio that he was going to knock me out. What's more I was sitting across from him in the studio at the time.

"Why, I should have offered him out right then and there, and found out how really tough he is. I like to fight guys who think and act tough and tough. I'll show him who's the tough guy."

"Why, I'll take all he's got and more," the lithe Irishman declared; "he'll fall over dead swinging."

The slender 22-year-old master of boxing technique had just finished 10 rounds of arduous training with four sparring partners, including his younger brother and embryo champ, Jackie, 17.

Conn showed good form in the rather lengthy session, during which he punched harder and with more accuracy than when he began training a fortnight ago.

So confident and cocksure is Conn of winning this impending battle with the Boston (N. Y.) challenger that he began discussing his chances in the heavyweight department of "maul mail."

"If I only weighed 200 pounds," he went on wistfully, "I know I could give Joe Louis a good battle. Those knockout artists lose their heads if they don't score early. A fighter with a good left jab (Editor's note: Conn allegedly has the best left hand in boxing today) might lift the title from the 'Brown Bomber.'"

Conn was caustic in his remarks about Lou Nova, believed to be the handsome Hibernian's next foe, providing he defeats Bettina. He commented:

"Nova once watched me in training camp when I fought in Philadelphia, and after the workout he told a friend of mine he could 'break me in half.' 'That Nova thinks he's a college professor but there's a lot of things about fighting you don't find in books.'" sooner or later the authorities would catch up with him. The Court directed him to get out and stay out of Bucks county.

The Polish farm hand, denied on the witness stand in court that he saw a fire start from a match which he flicked to the barn floor on the Laska farm, or that he was in a hurry to get away to look for another job. All his clothes and $14, which he had in an overcoat pocket in a garage, which served as his living quarters while in the employ of Mr. Laska, were destroyed in the fire.

The defendant, who is the father of eight children and has not been living with his wife for the past eight years, testified that in the morning after sleeping in the Laska barn he got up, "made a cigarette," lit it in the barn and walked out in order to wash himself. He testified he didn't see any fire burning when he left or that he threw his match in the straw which served as his bed.

The fire was discovered about 5:40 that morning and the barn completely burned.

"It all looked very suspicious," said President Judge Keller, "and it may have been that the fire started in an accidental way, but you had better go to your home in Philadelphia and stay out of Bucks County."

The defendant's address in Philadelphia is 2304 Louis street, Frankford. Frank Laska, who owns the Bensalem township farm, lives at 2353 Orthodox street, Phila.

Mrs. Julia Sifert, of Plumsteadville, was sworn in to serve as an interpreter for the defendant who is charged with burning the barn on the Laska farm, near Eddington, July 18. The Court appointed Paul J. Barrett, of Bristol, to serve as counsel for the defendant.

Frank Laska, Bensalem township, who owned the barn which was destroyed, estimated the loss at $12,000. He testified that Rychnak was in his employ as a farm hand until July 10, eight days before the fire.

Rychnak left the employ of Laska following some fuss about the payment of wages.

Private Felix R. Gowan, of the Doylestown sub-station of the P. M. P., who investigated the case, gave a description of the buildings on the Laska farm. The garage was occupied until eight or nine days before the fire.

Mrs. Jeannette Eismann, Eddington, testified she told her husband to summon the fire company.

"I thought it was a rubbish fire at first. It was about 5:40 in the morning. I saw the defendant walking along a lane about five minutes of six," testified Mrs. Eismann.

"I thought wouldn't it be funny if that tramp had been in the barn," said Mrs. Eismann.

"He was in such a hurry I was suspicious of him," said the woman witness.

William C. Daugherty, Bristol, testified he saw the defendant walking away from the burning barn along Hornet Lane about seven-tenths of a mile from the fire.

"The defendant hadn't shaved and I got suspicious of him at once," said Daugherty, who is a Blue Moon Hosiery Mill employee.

Daugherty, a volunteer fireman, and Constable Joseph Seader later accosted the defendant after conducting a search for the defendant.

Fire Marshal Raymond E. Strunk, of Quakertown, testified the defendant was walking along the road when he was picked up.

"Mr. Daugherty, Mr. Hughes and I came back to the scene of the fire with the defendant who said Laska owed him some money," said Fire Marshal Strunk.

Fire Marshal Strunk said he took the defendant to the Doylestown sub-station July 18 to be questioned.

Private Felix R. Gowan, who speaks Polish, testified the defendant is the father of eight children but hasn't seen or lived with his wife in eight years.

"The defendant told me he slept in the Laska barn the night before the fire," said Private Gowan. "He admitted setting the barn on fire accidentally when he threw a match in the hay after lighting a cigarette," said the officer.

"He said he didn't have time to put the fire out because he had to look for a job," said the investigating officer, who has been investigating fires for 14 years.

Recalled to testify, Frank Laska, who owns the property on which the barn was burned, said he never saw the defendant smoke in the barn and that he had been warned about it.

"We had 'No Smoking' signs posted on the barn," said the owner.

At the time of the fire no one was living in the dwelling house which was being renovated.

The Commonwealth rested its case at 11:15 this morning.

The defendant, taking the stand and aided by an interpreter, testified he worked for Mr. Laska seven months. He left Laska's farm because he worked too hard and got ruptured.

The defendant testified he slept in the Laska barn the night before the fire.

"I brought two heaps of straw into the barn and made a bed out of it and lay down on it and went to sleep," said the defendant.

tions of the left wrist. They were treated in Frankford Hospital, the investigating officer being Patrolman Swann, of Oxford Valley barracks.

On Route 13, one mile west of Bristol last evening at 9:30, the cars operated by Basil Capriotti, 20, of 2315 Wilson avenue, and Jonathan Rowland, 4524 Grant avenue, Philadelphia, sideswiped. The damage to the two machines is estimated at $180. No one was hurt. It was claimed by one driver that he went over the center line due to a car being parked by the roadside.

Mrs. Martha Snead, 47, of 1510 Lombard street, Philadelphia, is a patient in Doylestown Hospital, having possible skull fracture and internal injuries.

She was taken to the hospital about six o'clock Sunday morning by Harry C. Knight, Jr., 21, of New Hope, who told State Motor Police the woman was walking along Old York Road near Lahaska when his car struck her as she emerged from behind another automobile.

"Sells-Perk" Seascouts Win in Sports Tournament

At a sports tournament, held in Bristol Presbyterian Church, Saturday evening, "Sells-Perk" Seascout ship of Perkaskie was winner, with Bristol Seascout ship "Elks" coming in second, and the third contestant, "Robert Morris," of Morrisville, being last.

Bristol ship was most organized; and the boys were honored by the presence of Regional Commodore Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, and Bucks County Commodore F. Kemmerer, Perkaskie. Fred Hermann is skipper of the host ship, the localities serving refreshments to the group at the conclusion of the tournament.

Warsaw Streets Littered With Dead; Poles Still Fight

The ministry repeated the purpose of the conflict as stated by Premier Chamberlain: "To redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression."

French official quarters, as they have made clear in repeated statements in the last few weeks, share this view and they are especially determined that Germany shall not drive a diplomatic wedge between Britain and France.

Nevertheless, Hitler was expected to raise the olive branch shortly, if not directly or through Italy, then by way of some benevolently neutral country.

If Anglo-French persistence has persuaded him finally that a long and hard war is inevitable, his peace gesture, in the Allies' view will be aimed to put the blame for the war on London and Paris.

Charred Warsaw sent out broadcasts telling of carnage—interspersed with Chopin. More than 1000 civilians have been killed in a German bombardment that has gone on without ceasing since Saturday afternoon, the Warsaw radio station asserted.
